Lives YOU impacted...

"Pursuing my degree to help Indigenous people is too important to me to let it slip through my fingers because of cost. My education is a ticket off the reservation to better myself, so that I can come back and better my people.

Thank you and all the donors for giving to the American Indian Education Fund. Your support of AIEF has made it possible for me to realize my dream of pursuing my degree in psychology."

Meet Alberta

Freshman year of high school, Alberta and her two siblings, found themselves homeless sleeping on the floor of her grandmother's living room. Her father's addiction left a void in both the emotional and financial support of the family. Alberta could have easily given up, but instead, she chose to rise above every obstacle, graduating college as a scholarship recipient from PWNA's American Indian Education Fund. In South Dakota, where Alberta is from, roughly 60% of Native American children are considered to live in poverty while only 8% of South Dakota white children are living in poverty.

Meet Gracie

Gracie suffered from a very large mass on the underside of her belly. Like many other families on the reservation, having a vet look at Grace is something her family could not afford. Working Program Partners, PWNA had Gracie seen by a vet. Her X-ray revealed that she had developed an inguinal hernia-- a hole in the abdominal wall. Unfortunately, Grace's health quickly worsened as she began showing signs of an infection. Generous support from donors, saved Gracie's life by making the surgery, an emergency hysterectomy, and hernia repair, possible!
